Which company should I choose for double glass components

Overview

What are the best and worst double glazing companies?

We name the best and worst double glazing companies, reveal typical prices for double glazed windows and doors, and offer expert advice on getting the best windows. Our research reveals how well-known firms including Everest, Safestyle and Anglian compare when rated by hundreds of double glazing customers.

How many double glazing companies should you choose?

In our survey, 36% of people said they only considered one double glazing company. We wouldn't recommend relying on just one quote – get at least three, if you can. This will give you a better idea of what a reasonable price is. It will also give you a feel for different companies' approaches to help you find what you're most comfortable with.

How do I know if a double glazing company is reliable?

It's also worth checking their contact details and paperwork. They should freely give their phone number (preferably landline and mobile), full company address and email. Sometimes double glazing companies will use cold calling as a sales tactic, and this is often a sign of an unreliable company.

Can a tradesperson buy double glazing?

If you're already working on a building project, your tradesperson may be able to organise and buy double glazing for you, possibly at a trade price. For double glazing companies, the highest customer score in our survey was 76%. Rated lowest was a big-name brand with 66%.*
